Child still in isolation at local hospital

Adult patient from Liberia on Ebola watch now better

Chicago Tribune

Two travelers from Liberia who are being monitored for Ebola in Chicago have shown signs of improvement, but one will be tested for the disease out of “an abundance of caution,” health officials said.

A child passenger who became ill on a flight to O’Hare Airport on Tuesday is to be tested for Ebola, although the single incident of vomiting is the only symptom the child shows, state and city health officials said.

An adult who traveled separately from Liberia was moved out of an isolation unit at Rush University Medical Center in Chicago, officials said.

Also Wednesday, federal health officials took additional steps to monitor people coming into the United States from the three West African countries at the center of the outbreak.

Starting Monday, travelers who were in Liberia, Sierra Leone or Guinea will be required to take their temperature daily and report to local health officials in the U.S. for three weeks, the maximum period after exposure to Ebola in which symptoms can appear.

Travelers will be asked to provide contact information and may be subject to travel restrictions, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said.

Federal officials already are trying to screen the 150 or so people a day who come to the U.S. from the three West African countries. At the airports where passengers from those countries are permitted to arrive—in Atlanta, Chicago, Washington, New York and Newark, N.J.—officials are taking the travelers’ temperatures and looking for other possible Ebola symptoms, including vomiting, headaches, muscle aches and diarrhea.

The adult traveler from Liberia who is being monitored in Chicago had reported nausea and diarrhea upon arrival Tuesday and said he had been diagnosed with typhoid fever in August, according to the Chicago Ebola Resource Network, a consortium of the Chicago Department of Health and four hospitals handling potential Ebola cases.

Though the passenger had a normal temperature during a screening and no known risk of exposure, city protocols required the passenger to undergo a full medical evaluation.

It was determined that it was not necessary to test the patient for Ebola, according to a statement from Rush hospital.

The patient was listed in good condition

Wednesday.

Gov. Quinn also announced Wednesday the establishment of a statewide Ebola task force that will work closely with the Chicago network to ensure that hospitals and health officials across Illinois are prepared should any cases arise.

Officials have reported no confirmed cases of Ebola in Chicago and said there is no threat to the public.

Mayor Emanuel said the handling of the two travelers from Liberia demonstrates that Chi-ago is better prepared than officials in Dallas, where a sick man from Liberia was sent home from a hospital and later died from Ebola.

“They are identified on a plane, they’re transported from a plane to a hospital, from the hospital to another hospital,” Emanuel said. “That piece of every step, when we compare Dallas to this, the time used to learn what Dallas did wrong and improve, it looks at this point, quite effective.”

Emanuel said he told Dr. Bechara Choucair, city commissioner of public health, that he wants the city to “go above” the standards federal health officials have put in place for Ebola identification and treatment.

The mayor also said he wants doctors and nurses at hundreds of health care clinics city-wide to be trained on how to identify and respond to possible cases of Ebola.

Reasons I didn't register to vote (until this year)

Jessica Galliard

» jgalliard@tribune.com
» @jessicagalliard

My darkest secret? Until this year, at the age of 27, I had never registered to vote.

Just under the wire, I finally succumbed to the shame and ridicule and registered online in Illinois. Here are some reasons, either legitimate and extremely stupid, for why it took me so damn long.

- » My parents never did.
- » I have little to zero faith in U.S. politicians and their never-ending drive to take money from lobbyists in order to get re-elected and keep making more money.

» Until 2014, I had a Kansas driver's license—I've lived here for nine years—and I didn't think my birth control-hungry, flaming-blue souled vote mattered in the heartland.

» You know our votes don't really count, like, ever, right?

» I couldn't leave work to wait in line for hours.

» I hate waiting in line more than almost anything.

» I'm too indecisive for jury duty.

» I really just don't need any more stickers floating around my house, guys.

» Tyranny! Corruption! Blagojevich!

» A guy with whom I went on a few dates couldn't get past that I had never voted before, and he was kind of terrible so I felt it necessary to spite him and America by never registering?

» Have you ever seen "Black Sheep" with Chris Farley? The idea of getting trapped in one of those voting booths is terrifying.

» I'm still mad about that whole eight years with George W. Bush, even though I was definitely the only one in my eighth-grade class who submitted a vote through Kids Voting for Al Gore!

» Ignorance is bliss.

» I'm lazy.

» I couldn't handle the peer pressure and Internet shaming any further.

» I've run out of reasons.

» Registered!

It's never too late—go to elections.il.gov for information on how to register to vote.

JUST THE FACTS ON EBOLA

FEARS ABOUT
THE VIRUS IN THE
UNITED STATES
HAVE OUTPACED
NUMBER OF CASES

Public concerns about Ebola have grown much faster than the actual number of cases of the illness in the U.S.

A Pew Research Center survey released Tuesday found that 41 percent of Americans said they worried that they or someone in their families would be “exposed” to the Ebola virus, up from 32 percent two weeks ago.

Separately, a Gallup Poll released Tuesday found a decline in Americans’ confidence in the “federal government’s ability to handle Ebola,” from 60 percent expressing confidence a week ago to 52 percent now. The survey also showed that while a majority of Americans express some confidence that the government can “prevent a major outbreak” of the virus in the country and that U.S. hospitals can “diagnose and isolate” cases, fewer than 1 in 5 say they have a “great deal” of confidence. REDEYE, L.A. ## TIMELINE OF EVENTS DURING THE INTERNATIONAL EBOLA OUTBREAK IN 2014

WHAT IS SO SCARY ABOUT EBOLA?

Compared with malaria, Ebola afflicts and kills far fewer people. The five West African countries currently battling Ebola recorded nearly 280,000 malaria deaths in 2012, or about two-fifths of all malaria deaths that year worldwide. From the start of the Ebola outbreak through Oct. 3, more than 300 times as many people have died from AIDS as from Ebola.

EBOLA FAST FACTS

- » The Ebola virus is a severe, often fatal illness in humans that was first discovered in the 1970s in West and Central Africa.
- » The current outbreak, believed to have originated in Guinea, in West Africa, in December 2013, is the worst on record of the virus, killing at least 4,877 people, mostly in Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea.
- » Illinois residents with questions and concerns can call a newly created Ebola hotline at 800-889-3931 or go to ebola.illinois.gov.
- » Rush University Medical Center, University of Chicago Medical Center, Northwestern Memorial Hospital and Lurie Children's Hospital will take Ebola patients from other hospitals and health care providers for treatment of the disease.

How do you catch Ebola?

The origins of the virus are unknown, but research shows fruit bats are the likely host of the Ebola virus. Infection spreads to humans by handling an infected animal. The virus spreads from human to human through direct contact with bodily fluids, such as blood, semen, sweat or saliva, of those infected with the Ebola virus—or through contact with objects that have touched those fluids, such as clothing, mattresses or medical equipment.

What are the symptoms?

Sudden onset of fever, intense weakness, muscle pain, headache and sore throat are typical signs and symptoms. This is followed by vomiting, diarrhea, rash, impaired kidney and liver function and, in some cases, both internal and external bleeding, the latter including bleeding for the gums or blood in the stool. The incubation period—the interval from infection to onset of symptoms—is two to 21 days.

What is the treatment?

There's currently no proven treatment for Ebola. Patients are given fluids to treat symptoms, including dehydration. Roughly one-third of patients survive.

How dangerous is it for people in the U.S.?

The chances of an Ebola outbreak in the U.S. are exceedingly slim. Because Ebola is not an airborne virus, it is difficult to transmit. The U.S. has many more doctors and better medical facilities than the affected countries in West Africa.

OCT 12: A nurse in Dallas tests positive for Ebola, becoming first person to contract the virus in the U.S. Nina Pham was infected while caring for Duncan at Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital.

OCT 15: Second Texas nurse who treated Duncan has contracted Ebola. Amber Vinson is transferred to Emory University Hospital in Atlanta.

OCT 16: U.S. National Institutes of Health says nurse Pham will be moved from Dallas to an NIH isolation unit in Bethesda, Md.

OCT 17: President Obama appoints Ebola "czar" Ron Klain.

OCT 20: Nigeria is declared free of Ebola. In Texas, 43 people are taken off Ebola watch lists; The U.S. issues stricter guidelines for health workers treating Ebola victims. No skin or hair exposed.

OCT 21: An adult and child flying from Liberia to O'Hare Airport on Tuesday are placed under observation at Chicago hospitals after falling ill during their flights.

OCT 22: The child who flew from Liberia to Chicago is hospitalized and tested for Ebola. Gov. Quinn's office announces a statewide Ebola task force.

Suspect charged in 2nd death

After alleged confession, he keeps quiet in court

Chicago Tribune

He allegedly said he killed Anith Jones for a friend of a friend and was paid $300 and drugs worth another $200. He said he built a rapport with her, then met her for sex. He strangled her in about five minutes, he said, then stuffed her body in a trash can and left her in the basement of a vacant building, her body covered with teddy bears and tires.

Later, serial killer suspect Darren Deon Vann allegedly told police, he returned home to watch his brother's children. There, he said, he kept a knotted belt from a bathrobe in a bag next to the couch where he slept; that belt, he told police, was going to be the weapon for his next murder.

There is no indication authorities have charged a second person in connection with Jones' death.

The purported details of Jones' killing emerged Wednesday, as authorities charged 43-year-old Vann in her slaying and he made his first appearance in a Lake County, Ind., court to face a murder charge in another slaying.

The court appearance ended after just two minutes, though, when Vann, who police said had talked to them at length and even made a videotaped confession, refused to speak to the judge or even acknowledge the proceedings.

Judge Kathleen Sullivan said she took his resistance as a refusal to participate in the hearing and postponed it for one week. Officials said Vann was being held in isolation at the Lake County Jail in Crown Point.

The charges against Vann in Jones' killing come on top of murder charges in the strangling of 19-year-old Afrikka Hardy in a Hammond motel room Friday. Authorities

INVESTIGATION EXPANDS

Authorities continued their widening investigation Wednesday, trying to verify claims that serial killer suspect Darren Deon Vann might have committed homicides in other states, including North Carolina and Texas. Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart and officers using a cadaver dog searched about 30 abandoned homes in Markham and Hazel Crest.

TRIBUNE

have said they linked Vann to the deaths of five other women whose bodies were found in abandoned homes in Gary; in each case, they said, Vann led officers to the locations.

Four of the victims have been identified. Besides Jones and Hardy, they are Kristine Williams, 36, of Gary, and Teaira Batey, 28, also of Gary. The Lake County coroner's office was continuing efforts to identify three other victims whose remains were partially decomposed or skeletal. The office on Wednesday appealed to the public for help.

HOMICIDE TRACKER

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

In the past week, five homicides were reported in Chicago, with three of the victims in their 20s, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

Thirty-seven percent of the 339 homicide victims this year were in their 20s, according to RedEye data as of Wednesday afternoon.

That percentage has been decreasing. Last year, 41 percent of the 441 homicide victims were in their 20s. In 2012, 43 percent of the 522 homicide victims this year were in their 20s.

Nineteen homicides have been reported so far this month. Thirty-two homicides were recorded in October 2013, RedEye found. TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM | @TRACYSWARTZ

Canada's parliament attacked, soldier shot

A gunman attacked Canada's parliament on Wednesday, with shots fired near where Prime Minister Stephen Harper was speaking, and a soldier was killed at a nearby war memorial, stunning the Canadian capital.

The gunman was shot dead, and Harper was safely removed. The killing of the Canadian soldier was the second this week with a possible link to Islamic militants.

Witness accounts indicated the man who shot dead the soldier guarding the National War Memorial in central Ottawa, went on to attack the parliament building minutes later. Canadian police said, however, they could not confirm it was the same person.

The shooting followed an attack on two soldiers in Quebec on Monday carried out by a convert to Islam. U.S. officials said they had been advised the dead gunman in Wednesday's shootings was also a Canadian convert to Islam.

Canadian police were investigating a man named Michael Zehaf-Bibeau as a possible suspect in Wednesday's attack, said a source familiar with the matter. U.S. government sources said he was born Michael Joseph Hall but later changed his name.

Harper was defiant when he spoke on television 10 hours later, with some buildings still under emergency lockdown and police saying they were still looking into the possibility of a second gunman.

Harper said it would become clear in days to come whether the gunman—whom he called “a terrorist”—was acting alone or had accomplices. “Let there be no misunderstanding. We will not be intimidated. Canada will never be intimidated,” he said.

Canada announced this month it was joining the battle against Islamic State fighters who have taken over parts of Iraq and Syria, and Harper said the attack would prompt Canada to redouble its efforts to fight against “terrorist organizations” abroad.

After Harper spoke, police lifted their blockade of the downtown area except on Parliament Hill.

Officials: Blast outside Cairo University wounds 11

A bomb outside Cairo University wounded 11 people Wednesday, among them several police officers, Egyptian officials said. The militant group Ajnad Misr claimed responsibility in a statement posted on militant forums and the group's Twitter account, SITE Intelligence Group said.

Ex-Blackwater guards convicted in 2007 killings

A U.S. federal jury found three American former Blackwater guards guilty of manslaughter and weapons charges Wednesday and a fourth of murder in connection with the 2007 killing of 14 unarmed Iraqis at a Baghdad traffic circle.

Man arrested after jumping White House fence

A man jumped the White House fence Wednesday evening and was attacked by Secret Service dogs before being arrested, a Secret Service spokesman said. “Dogs got him,” the spokesman said, referring to the intruder. Video showed Secret Service agents surrounding the man on the north lawn of the White House.

Michael Jordan and Derrick Rose were drafted by the Bulls, but not all great Chicago players started their careers here. Take Pau Gasol, who could be one of the missing pieces in the Bulls' next championship puzzle; they signed him as a free agent this offseason.

Not all great sports traditions originated in Chicago, either. But the city has acquired major talent and big events the past 10 years—another city's loss is Chicago's gain. Whatever the outcomes, these additions made waves.

JAY CUTLER (2009)

The Bears acquired quarterback Jay Cutler via trade from Denver in April 2009. Some say the jury's still out on No. 6, but whatever happens, he's provided the Bears stability at quarterback—something the team lacked for years prior to his arrival.

BIG TEN MEN'S BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT (2011)

In June 2011, the Big Ten announced that its men's basketball tournament would return to the United Center in 2013 after five years in Indianapolis. The 2013 event set a record for total tournament attendance. Chicago also will host in 2015, 2019 and 2021.

THEO EPSTEIN (2011)

The Cubs acquired front office executive Theo Epstein from Boston in October 2011, luring him with a five-year deal worth more than $15 million. He helped break one baseball curse in Boston, and if he can do the same in Chicago, he'll be the most important pickup ever.

BRANDON MARSHALL (2012)

Brandon Marshall and Jay Cutler were once a dynamic duo in Denver, so when the Bears brought Marshall to Chicago in March 2012, fans rejoiced. The Pro Bowl receiver had an immediate impact, becoming Cutler's favorite target and racking up more than 1,500 receiving yards in his first season with Chicago.

PAU GASOL (2014)

The Bulls signed the former L.A. Lakers center in July 2014 after he became a free agent. Gasol's inside presence should add to an already strong frontcourt and could help the Bulls reach the NBA Finals for the first time since 1998.

ADDISON RUSSELL (2014)

The name Addison Russell might not sound familiar, but if all goes according to plan on the North Side, it will soon. Russell is a highly touted shortstop prospect, and the Cubs acquired him in a trade that sent Jeff Samardzija to Oakland in July 2014.

NFL DRAFT (2014)

After calling Radio City Music Hall home the past nine years, the NFL draft is coming to Chicago. Mayor Emanuel lobbied aggressively to get the highly-rated TV event, and the announcement was made in October 2014 that Chicago had defeated a competing bid from L.A.

1	How can the Bears repair any rifts there might be in the locker room?	Scotch tape. The team loves using it to scrapbook together.	Drinks. And lots of them.	Perhaps a home victory?	It's time to Bear down and hug it out!	Talk to the Houston rapper Riff Raff. Actually, on second thought, don't. Have you seen that fool?!
2	The next time Jay Cutler throws a pass...	... an angel gets its wings. Or a kitten bursts into tears. One of the two.	... get the defense ready to go back on the field.	... Brandon Marshall (or the other team) will catch it.	... let's hope one of our receivers catches it.	... Immediately throw your beer or nachos. I bet your toss will go farther (and be more accurate) than Cutler's.
3	Rate your level of worry for Corey Crawford's injury.	Between 5 and 5 million. Guess the number and win a decoder ring.	Not Ebola level. More like SARS.	On a scale of 1 to 10, French Montana.	Less worried than I'd be if Corey were to speak about it to thousands at a championship rally.	Why do goalies wear all those pads if they're gonna get injured? I thought that stuff was like the bubble wrap of hockey.
4	If you designed a tattoo for former Hawk Brent Sopel, what would it be?	A hawk crushing a snake eating a chipmunk. Riding a unicorn.	A tattoo that says, "INK ME."	A portrait of Cristobal Huet (never forget '09).	His face on the cover of a romance novel. Chiseled jaw, flowing hair and all!	I would totally just design something using his initials. "B.S." worked into a sleeve = AMAZING!
5	What does Peyton Manning do for an encore after setting the TD pass record?	Goes to Disney World. Rides Dumbo. Squeals. Isn't embarrassed. He's Peyton [bleeping] Manning.	Throws a TD, then gets on the bronco and rides out of Mile High.	As much as it hurts to say it, wins another Super Bowl.	Play long enough to surpass Brett Favre's record for INTs, too. Can someone still play into their 70s?	Remind everyone that he and I are the two best things to ever come out of the state of Louisiana.

We say it every year how talented Jay is, how much talent he has. But the NFL is not a talent contest. It's a winning contest. ... If your quarterback can't make plays in certain situations for you to win games, he's not getting the job done."

—Brian Urlacher, on the "Kap and Haugh Show" on 87.7 FM The Game on Wednesday

THE DIGIT 11.5 percent

According to an annual survey, 11.5 percent of the NBA's general managers believe the Bulls will win the title this season. The league released the results Wednesday. The Bulls trailed San Antonio and Cleveland as favorites. General managers could not vote for their own teams, coaches or players. At 35.7 percent, Joakim Noah was tabbed as the league's best defensive player, while Tom Thibodeau's defensive schemes were recognized as best in the league (92.9 percent).

Report: UNC had fake classes for athletes

A report into an academic fraud scandal at the University of North Carolina released Wednesday found that for 18 years two academic advisers ran a program of fake classes that helped many athletes at the school remain eligible to play sports. The report does not incriminate any coaches or athletic administrators in the scheme, carried out by two people within the African and Afro-American Studies department.

GRAND ENTRANCE

MERCADITO CREW THINKS BIG AT NEW RIVER NORTH LATE-NIGHT BAR TIPPLING HALL

By Kate Bernot | REDEYE

“It’s going to be the culmination of everything the Tippling Bros. likes to do with beverages, but times 10.” That’s how Tad Carducci of cocktail consultants Tippling Bros. described Tippling Hall to me—in January 2012. Yes, it took him and business partner Paul Tanguay nearly three years to open this cocktail bar with Mercadito Hospitality (Mercadito, Mercadito Fish, Mercadito Counter), and all parties involved have invested a lot—literally—in the project. Years later, Tanguay echoes Carducci’s original vision for the bar: “[It’s] a kind of culmination of what Tad and I have been working on for years in terms of draft cocktails and shaken and stirred cocktails, but wanting to bring in a fun element, a sort of low-key, low-brow approach.” That loosen-your-mixology-bowtie attitude is partially inspired by the bar’s 4 a.m. license, which was one of the initial reasons the crew snapped up the former Hop Haus space under the Brown Line “L” tracks. I stopped in twice during opening week to find out whether Tippling Hall was ready for its big reveal.

Looks count

The interior, which includes a full dining room as well as a bar seating area, is a huge improvement on Hop Haus’ dated plastic tablecloths and striped vinyl booths. All the River North fixtures are there—wood beams, industrial-funky light fixtures, a handful of unobtrusive TVs—but it was hard even to notice them given the post-work crowd on a Friday evening. A hostess told my friend and me that all the tables were full with reservations, but she put our name on a waiting list with a look that told me I probably should abandon all hope. We ordered our drinks and stalked bar stools like they’re the last gazelles on the Serengeti, but after nearly two hours, we still were standing. Other people in the bar area seemed confused by whether the bar area tables are first-come, first-served—one of many details Tippling Hall still is working out. “The bar area is still a work in progress,” Tanguay said. “We’re setting it for dinner, but we’re not sure if it should just be a walk-in space. A lot of elements in that space are a work in progress.” A Monday night proved more manageable and I quickly found a few comfortable bar stools. Over the course of a couple of hours, a lively crowd gathered, but drinkers weren’t two-deep at the bar this time. Early in the night, the gender ratio skewed noticeably toward the button-down-and-khaki male.

... and so do cocktails

Holy booze, Batman. The cleverly designed, 24-page drink menu reads like a comic book, with tons of graphics and even some goofy jokes. I could have spent upward of 15 minutes poring over the whole thing, but if you don’t want to ignore your companions while you read, it might help to know what you’re in the mood for. My friend was eager to try one of two “Sloshees” (frozen cocktails), but was bummed to hear that the frozen cocktail machines haven’t been installed yet. Ditto on the nitro draft system that will dispense the Ronzio coffee cocktail. Instead, I zeroed in on the six draft cocktails, a Tippling Bros. signature, which are made in batches and poured through draft lines. My clear favorite was the Misty in the Mountains ($12), a vibrant and refreshing mezcal-based drink that delicately toes the line between smoky and sweet thanks to pineapple juice and honey. A “Spinal Tap” draft cocktail—dispensed with the pull of a huge guitar fretboard—will rotate seasonally. Until December, it’s The Derek Smalls ($11), which Tanguay described as “a cucumber cocktail that has some fall qualities” thanks to its base spirit, Zubrowka bison grass vodka. Aromatic and vegetal, this Polish vodka is actually grass-flavored, which might intrigue fans of bolder-style gins. Shaken and stirred cocktails, of which there are 10, arrived nearly as swiftly as the draft ones, which impressed me on a busy night. Tanguay said he’s been surprised by how many strong, dark drinks the bar has sold in its opening week. He cited the popularity of the Deep Dish Manhattan ($13), a riff on the classic that includes Koval four-grain whiskey, Jeppson’s malort and a salty pizza crust garnish. I found the malort a bit jarring in this classic cocktail, but I guess I’m in the minority.

Deep Dish Manhattan

Attention beer & wine drinkers

While cocktails are front and center on the menu, the Bros. haven’t forgotten about the rest. “Tippling Hall is just a drinking hall,” Tanguay said. “It’s where you can bring your geeky cocktail friend, your cousin from Detroit who’s a beer drinking guy and maybe somebody else who’s a wine drinker.” Draft beers are refreshingly varied, from Bud Light to Penrose P2 Belgian pale ale to Founders All Day IPA, all available in 8-, 20- or 34-ounce pours. Wine, too, is available by the inch (pay for how much you drink) or by the traditional glass and bottle. If you’re still not convinced this menu is huge, consider this: Even after two visits, I didn’t even scratch the surface of the seven bloody marys, four boiler-makers or any of the canned and bottled beer. The something-for-everyone approach extends to the food menu, where “global comfort food” includes bar bites, flatbreads, sandwiches and entrees as far-ranging as guacamole ($8.50), bacon-wrapped dates ($10.50), a wedge salad ($12.50), roasted chicken tagine ($20.50) and a seven-grain Thai bowl ($14.50).

Bottom line

The Tippling Bros. have serious cocktail chops, but it’s fun to see them shake off the high-brow mantle a bit—these days, a drink made with blue curacao (like the Curly & The Turk draft cocktail) is gutsier than a speakeasy-style bourbon blah blah blah. Once some pesky logistical dust settles, I expect this place to be just the fun, late-night spot the city has waited so long for.

flowering plant—lend their color to a fortified mussel broth that's also flavored with apple cider from Seedling Farms.
The velvety soup is garnished with peekytoe crab salad and a slice of foie gras that more than justify the dish's pricetag.
The richness of the crab and foie gras makes this a soup to linger over—but don't wait to order it. Davies anticipates modifying the soup to a late fall preparation in approximately three weeks. KATE BERNOT

Curiously, you won't find egg or cream in this chocolatey, carbonated beverage that originated in New York more than a hundred years ago. You can acquaint yourself with this East Coast classic at the combination soda fountain/deli/comfort food palace Eleven City Diner. The drink is lovingly re-created here with two pumps of U-bet's syrup (shipped from New York and New Jersey), milk, a shot of whipped cream and topped with "a draw" of soda water that gives it a "whipped-up head," said owner Brad Rubin, whose father was a soda jerk in the 40s. I asked the younger Rubin why the name doesn't match the ingredients, and he said there have been numerous variations over the years. "We believe that we're staying true to the genre," he said. Lighter than a milkshake but just as rich, the frothy drink is served in a tall glass with extra seltzer on the side to add as needed. TRIBUNE

REDEYE ILLUSTRATION, NOT THE ACTUAL ALBUM

5 things to know about hometown rap hero Chance The Rapper's new music

By Ernest Wilkins | REDEYE

There will be a new Chance The Rapper full-length in 2014. In a lengthy interview with Billboard magazine on Wednesday, the Chicago native revealed a lot of new information. The biggest announcement: His next project will be out before the end of the year. Despite a consistent stream of one-off singles throughout 2014, this will mark his first full release since 2013's breakout "Acid Rap." We combed through the loooooong piece for five things you need to know about the new record. ERWILKINS@TRIBUNE.COM | @ERNESTWILKINS

1 The name of the project is called "Surf" and will be helmed by Social Experiment band member Nico "Donnie Trumpet" Segal. "Surf" is the first project, which is coming out before the end of 2014. It's the first Social Experiment project. It's a big step for all of us all putting our heads together and letting Nico [Segal, aka Donnie Trumpet] hold the reins and carry it."

2 He's kind of tired of playing songs from "Acid Rap."

"I'm definitely tired of playing 'Acid Rap.' I'm definitely tired of playing 'Juice.'"

3 There are some big names attached to collaborate on the new music. We're working really closely with Francis Starlite from Francis and the Lights. He's been a really been a big help on 'Surf.' We worked with Migos. We worked with J. Cole. We did some work with Emily King just last week. Somebody who helped us out a lot with just getting into the project was Rick Rubin. And Frank Ocean."

(Chance and Frank Ocean? Chance and Migos? Yes, that will do nicely.)

4 Chance truly appreciates being an independent artist.

"I can flex that unlimited capability of an independent artist. I can do whatever videos I want, I can play whatever shows I want. I can release when I want, talk how I want, freely about any subject. I have a certain responsibility and I feel like conforming to the mixtape to mixtape to album rule would just defeat the whole purpose of not signing [with a major label]."

5 SaveMoney isn't just the name of Chance's crew, it's a lifestyle.

"I'm not a chain-buying-ass [bleep]. I'm still a very frugal person. But everything that does get spent is a reinvestment into my own music. Which is why I own a bus and print all my own merchandise and run my own website and do my own releases and partner with really cool helpful companies like SoundCloud."

Nice ice, baby!

America loved Tara Lipinski and Johnny Weir's skating commentary during the Sochi Olympics so much that it scored them a job. NBC on Wednesday announced that the pair officially have been named the network's new lead figure skating broadcast team, which will include covering the 2018 Olympics. "I love my sport and I can't wait to go on more Olympic journeys!" Weir said. We'll be right there with you for the trip.

Work it like Tina Fey

Tina Fey is one of a handful of women covering Elle magazine for its November Women in Hollywood series, donning a leather trench and sexy black dress. In case you find yourself in front of a camera as a model anytime soon, here's some advice: "Just turn your brain off and pretend like it makes sense for you to be there," she told People magazine. Oh, we're good with this one.

THE DIGIT

8 That's the length in seconds of a Taylor Swift song released as a glitch on Canadian iTunes, thr.com reports. "Track 3," aka 8 seconds of static, shot to the top of the country's charts Tuesday, ahead of actual, real songs like "Shake It Off" and "Welcome to New York." Those kids will buy anything these days, we swear.

First in funny

Thrilling: Neil Patrick Harris is hosting the 2015 Oscars. Shocking: He wasn't the Academy's first choice. According to The Hollywood Reporter, producers begged 2014 MC Ellen DeGeneres to return, on the heels of her 8 percent increase in viewership. They also went after Chris Rock and Julia Louis-Dreyfus before finally landing on NPH. All fine options, sure, but the Academy scored themselves one host who's the total package.

THE QUOTE

"In a shallow business, I just had to come to terms with being really OK with not being ... symmetrical."

—Amy Poehler, to People magazine, on not always feeling attractive in Hollywood. Don't look at your own face too closely in the mirror or you'll be in for a bit of a shock, readers.

Pizza! Pizza!

Did you have the same high-school job as Bill Murray? The "St. Vincent" star revealed Tuesday night on "Jimmy Kimmel Live!" that one of his pre-fame jobs was working at a Little Caesars in Evanston with now-celebrity chef Kerry Simon. "We were the class the stars fell on," Murray said. So ... does he get free crazy bread for life?
